The following article is rather unnecessary in this military context, but is included as both of our Cunninghame's succeeded to this title.

A Baronet's Death

A SUCCESSOR N.S. WALES

SQUATTER.

The death is announced by cable of Sir A. E. Fairlie-Cunninghame, Bt. The successor to the title is Mr. W. E. Cunninghame, of Marenga, near Young, N.SW. Sir Alfred Edward Fairlie Cunninghame was the 12th baronet of the baronetcy of Cunninghame of Robertland, Ayrshire. He was born in 1852, and succeeded his brother in 1897. Sir William Edward Cunninghame, the 13th baronet, is a second cousin of the late baronet. He married in 1887 Georgina Maud, daughter of the late Mr. Edward Hardman Macartney, and there are seven children issue of the marriage. The family is descended from the Hon. William Cunninghame, and son of the first Earl of Glencarn. The first baronet, who was master of the works to King James VI of Scotland, was created a baronet with remainder to his heirs male whatsoever. At the death of the 4th baronet the title remained dormant until assumed by William Cunningham on being served heir in 1778 to his great-grandfather, Sir David Cunninghame, of Robertland, who was grandfather of the 1st baronet. Sir W. E. Cunninghame, who now succeeded to the title of baronet, is slightly over 50 years of age, and has owned the station property Windermere, in the district of Marengo, about 20 miles from Young, for many years. He has been a member of the shire council and pastures protection board from the beginning. He is a gentleman of most retiring habits, and is held in highest esteem in his own and neighboring districts, taking a lively interest in all matters of public concern. His assistance has always been available. He is most hospitable. Sir W. E. Cunninghame was never known to disclose his home connections. This succession will be a source of general congratulation.

Baronet- Grazier Crushed To Death

Manilla, Wednesday. - Sir Hussey Burgh Fairlie-Cunninghame, the 14th baronet of Robertland, Ayrshire, who for eight years had been a farmer in the Manilla district, was crushed to death yesterday when the tractor he was working overturned on the bank of a gully on his property at Keepit.

When found a few minutes after the accident, he was still alive, but died shortly afterwards.

Sir William Alan Fairlie-Cunninghame, who has succeeded to the title, is in charge of the preparatory section of St. John's Psychology School. Vaucluse. He proposes to continue his work.
The new Lady Fairlie-Cuninghame was formerly Irene Alice Terry. Heir to the baronetcy is their son, Henry, aged eight.

A BARONET KILLED.

In Motor Accident at Manilla.

Sir Hussey Fairlie-Cunninghame, fourteenth baronet of Robertsland, Ayrshire, who for 8 years has been a farmer in the Manilla district, was crushed to death when a tractor he was working overturned on the bank of a gully, on his property at Keepit. When found, a few minutes after the accident, he was still alive, but he died shortly afterwards.

The Riverina Grazier (Hay) 10/2/1939
By the tragically sudden death of Hussey Fairlie-Cunninghame, the College lost an Old Boy of fine type. As a boy at school, he was vigorous, even-tempered, and always cheerful; it was not surprising that he should become generally popular, but his natural modesty prevented his becoming spoiled. Destined for the land at a time when wool was cheaper to grow and more profitable to sell than it is at present, he had no reason for anxiety as to his future. In those days the boy going on the land was not expected to pass examinations of undue severity; he turned his attention to more practical pursuits, and school-life was comparatively easy for him. Hussey fitted in well with this scheme; he had mental ability of no mean order, but he did not overstrain it, though he looked with broad-minded tolerance on the efforts of those unable to side-step the public examiner. Out of school he was very much in his element, football having a special appeal to him. Incidentally, he was heir to one of the oldest Scotch baronetcies, a fact that he most successfully concealed.

The writer renewed his acquaintance with him in the last two years, and found without surprise that

The writer renewed his acquaintance with him in the last two years, and found without surprise that Hussey had developed into a successful land-owner and a leading and highly esteemed member of the Manilla district. He had enlisted in 1916 in the artillery, and went through the rest of the Great War, returning as a lieutenant.
